2006 Annual Ham Campout - W6TEE

This was at Casini Ranch on the Russian River, near the ocean, from Thursday, June 15, until Monday, June 19. We mostly used 147.555 simplex. Our RVs had hookups. We could have let dry campers between these big sites, but had no takers. Our motellers came a day later.

Day trips are a big part of our campouts, and Friday morning, everyone then in camp left for a hike through Armstrong Redwoods, near Guerneville. We then drove to the Korbel Winery, where we had lunch.

We stopped at the Hartford Family Winery on our way back to camp. Our three motel campers had arrived by the time we got back. Saturday morning, most of us drove north up the coast. We stopped at a small bakery and coffee shop at Sea Ranch. We continued to Gualala to shop and find the best bowl of clam chowder. We stopped at the Kruse Rhododendron Park on the way back. That night we had a traditional community bean pot, with us all eating together in the pleasant weather. The 13 of us had a good Father's Day Brunc at Northwood Lodge on Sunday. Our three motellers said goodbye and started home. The rest went to another hike. We parked at Shell Beach, and two vehicles took the hikers to Pomo Canyon Campground, on Willow Creek Road, where we took the Pomo Canyon Trail back to Shell Beach. The next day we headed home. It was a three hour drive or less, depending on the route and stops. We used simplex and the MVRC repeater. Everyone said that they had a good time. The weather had been perfect and we had interesting things to do\

We had told people not to depend on cell phones to call home or each other. There were pockets of signal, but none were usable. Exceptions - In the area around the Korbel and Hartford Wineries, we had service on Nextel, but not Verizon. Verizon service started at the southern end of Sea Ranch, and continued north to Gualala, but not Nextel. The camp retro payphone worked fine. Wi-Fi worked good in camp for e-mail.
